Executive Summary

Lumina Group introduced a hybrid working system to provide greater flexibility for employees while maintaining business performance. Although the transition brought positive changes, it also created several communication challenges. Information was not always delivered consistently across departments, employee participation in internal activities gradually declined, and opportunities for interaction became more limited than before.

To address these issues, this project proposes an internal communication campaign designed to strengthen communication across the organization and improve employee engagement. The campaign focuses on creating clear and consistent messaging, encouraging two-way communication, and providing employees with more opportunities to stay informed and involved in company activities.

The communication strategy combines several internal channels, including email newsletters, Microsoft Teams, the company intranet, and monthly Town Hall meetings. Rather than relying on a single platform, each channel has a specific role in delivering information and supporting interaction between employees and management.

The success of the campaign will be measured through several key indicators, including employee engagement scores, newsletter open rates, Town Hall participation, and employee feedback. By implementing a structured communication approach, Lumina Group is expected to build a stronger organizational culture and create a more connected workplace where employees feel informed, engaged, and aligned with the company's goals.

Business Background

Lumina Group is a multinational company operating across several business sectors with a workforce distributed between headquarters and regional offices. To support operational flexibility and adapt to changing workplace expectations, the company recently implemented a hybrid working model that allows employees to work both remotely and on-site.

The new working arrangement has provided greater flexibility and improved work-life balance for many employees. However, the reduced frequency of face-to-face interaction has also changed the way employees communicate and collaborate. Information is now shared through multiple digital platforms, making it more challenging to maintain consistency and ensure that every employee receives the same message at the right time.

As the organization continues to grow, effective internal communication becomes increasingly important. Employees need clear direction, timely updates, and opportunities to engage with the organization regardless of where they work. A strong communication system not only supports daily operations but also helps strengthen organizational culture, build trust, and encourage collaboration across departments.

Recognizing these needs, Lumina Group plans to strengthen its internal communication through a structured campaign that aligns communication activities with business objectives while creating a more connected and engaged workforce.

Business Challenges

Low Employee Engagement

Since the implementation of the hybrid working model, employee participation in internal initiatives has gradually declined. Attendance at Town Hall meetings became less consistent, while engagement with internal newsletters and company campaigns also decreased. Although employees remained productive in their daily responsibilities, their involvement in activities that strengthen organizational culture was noticeably lower than before.

Reduced engagement can weaken employees' sense of belonging and make it more difficult for the organization to build collaboration across departments. Without regular interaction and active participation, employees may become less connected to the company's goals and values.

Inconsistent Information Distribution

As communication shifted to multiple digital platforms, important information was not always delivered consistently across the organization. Different departments relied on different communication channels, causing delays and creating situations where employees received incomplete or outdated information.

When communication lacks consistency, misunderstandings become more likely and employees may struggle to identify which information is the most accurate or up to date. Over time, this can reduce trust in internal communication and affect overall organizational efficiency.

Limited Two-Way Communication

As communication shifted to multiple digital platforms, important information was not always delivered consistently across the organization. Different departments relied on different communication channels, causing delays and creating situations where employees received incomplete or outdated information.

When communication lacks consistency, misunderstandings become more likely and employees may struggle to identify which information is the most accurate or up to date. Over time, this can reduce trust in internal communication and affect overall organizational efficiency.

Communication Objectives

Following the challenges identified in the previous section, this communication strategy aims to strengthen internal communication and improve employee engagement across Lumina Group. The campaign is designed not only to improve the flow of information but also to create a more connected workplace where employees feel informed, involved, and aligned with the organization's direction.

To achieve these goals, the campaign focuses on the following communication objectives:

1. Improve Employee Engagement

Increase employee participation in internal communication initiatives by creating more relevant, accessible, and engaging communication experiences across all business units.

2. Strengthen Information Consistency

Ensure that important organizational information is communicated clearly and consistently through standardized messaging and coordinated communication channels.

3. Encourage Two-Way Communication

Provide employees with more opportunities to share feedback, ask questions, and participate in organizational conversations through surveys, discussion forums, and Town Hall sessions.

4. Build a Stronger Organizational Culture

Strengthen employees understanding of the company's vision, values, and strategic priorities while fostering a greater sense of belonging within the organization

5. Measure Communication Effectiveness

Establish measurable performance indicators to evaluate campaign outcomes and support continuous of future communication initiatives.

Audience Profile

Before determining the communication approach, it is important to understand who the campaign is intended for. The following audience profile highlights the key characteristics, communication preferences, and information needs of the employees who will be the primary audience of this campaign.

Age Range

22-45 years old

Work Arrangement

Hybrid (Office & Remote)

Digital Platforms

Microsoft Teams, Email, Company Intranet

Communication Needs

- Clear and timely company updates
- Easy access to organizational information
- Opportunities of employee achievements
- Better collaboration across departments

Communication Preferences

- Short and concise messages
- Visual communication materials
- Interactive Town Hall sessions
- Monthly newsletters
- Digital communication that is accessible from any location

Stakeholder Mapping

Effective internal communication requires collaboration between multiple stakeholders within the organization. Each stakeholder has different responsibilities and influences the success of the campaign in different ways. Understanding these roles helps ensure that communication activities are coordinated, consistent, and aligned with organizational objectives.

The following stakeholder groups have been identified as key contributors to the implementation of this internal communication campaign.

Executive Leadership

Executive Leadership plays a strategic role by setting the overall direction of the campaign and reinforcing organizational priorities. Their visible support demonstrates commitment to transparent communication and encourages employees to actively participate in company initiatives.

Human Resources Department

The Human Resources (HR) team is responsible for coordinating campaign activities, managing employee engagement programs, and ensuring that communication initiatives align with organizational policies and employee development objectives.

Internal Communication Team

The Internal Communication team develops communication materials, manages content distribution, and ensures that messages remain consistent across all communication channels. They also monitor campaign performance and collect employee feedback throughout the implementation period.

Department Managers

Department Managers serve as communication ambassadors within their respective teams. They help reinforce key messages, encourage employee participation, and provide feedback from employees to management.

Employees

Employees are the primary audience of the campaign and play an active role in its success. Their participation, feedback, and engagement are essential for creating an open communication culture and achieving the campaign objectives.

Understanding the roles of each stakeholder provides a strong foundation for developing communication messages that are relevant, consistent, and aligned with organizational objectives. Based on this stakeholder analysis, the next section outlines the key messages that will guide all communication activities throughout the campaign.

Key Messages

To ensure consistency throughout the campaign, a set of core communication messages has been developed to guide all internal communication activities. These messages are designed to reinforce the campaign objectives while encouraging employees to stay informed, engaged, and connected with the organization.

Each message reflects the organization's commitment to transparency, collaboration, and employee engagement, ensuring that communication remains clear and meaningful across different channels.

Core Message

One Lumina, One Directions.

Together, we communicate, collaborate, and grow.

The core message represents the overall purpose of the campaign by emphasizing unity across departments and encouraging employees to work toward shared organizational goals despite different work locations.

Supporting Messages

Stay Informed

Employees will receive timely, relevant, and consistent information that helps them understand company priorities, organizational updates, and upcoming initiatives.

Stay Connected

Communication is not limited by location. Whether working remotely or in the office, every employee should feel connected to colleagues, leaders, and the organization's culture.

Stay Involved

Employees are encouraged to actively participate in discussions, provide feedback, and contribute ideas that support continuous organizational improvement.

Grow Together

Collaboration, knowledge sharing, and mutual support are essential to building a stronger workplace where both employees and the organization can grow together.

Communication Tone

To maintain consistency across all communication materials, the campaign adopts the following communication tone:

- Clear and easy to understand.
- Professional but approachable.
- Transparent and honest.
- Positive and encouraging.
- Inclusive and respectful.

These key messages will serve as the foundation for every communication activity throughout the campaign. By maintaining consistent messaging across all communication channels, Lumina Group can strengthen employee understanding, reinforce organizational values, and create a more engaging internal communication experience.

Communication Strategy

Based on the business challenges and communication objectives identified in the previous sections, this campaign adopts an integrated internal communication strategy that focuses on improving information flow, encouraging employee participation, and strengthening organizational culture. Rather than relying on a single communication activity, the strategy combines multiple initiatives that work together to create a more engaging and consistent communication experience across the organization.

The strategy is built around four key strategic pillars, each designed to address a specific communication challenge while supporting the overall campaign objectives.

1. Build Consistent Communication

A consistent communication system helps ensure that every employee receives the same information regardless of their department or work location. To achieve this, all internal communication materials will follow standardized messaging, visual identity, and communication guidelines.

By delivering clear and consistent messages across different platforms, employees can better understand organizational priorities and reduce the risk of miscommunication.

2. Encourage Employee Participation

Effective internal communication should create opportunities for employees to actively participate rather than simply receive information. The campaign encourages two-way communication through employee surveys, interactive Town Hall sessions, discussion forums, and feedback channels.

Creating space for employee participation allows the organization to better understand employee perspectives while strengthening trust between employees and management.

3. Deliver Communication Through Multiple Channels

Different communication channels serve different purposes. Instead of relying on one platform, the campaign integrates email newsletters, Microsoft Teams, the company intranet, digital posters, and Town Hall meetings to ensure information reaches employees effectively.

Using multiple channels also increases message visibility and accommodates different communication preferences across the workforce.

4. Measure and Improve Continuously

Communication should be evaluated regularly to ensure that campaign objectives are being achieved. Throughout the campaign, employee engagement, participation rates, newsletter performance, and employee feedback will be monitored to identify opportunities for improvement.

Continuous evaluation enables the organization to refine communication activities and respond more effectively to employee needs over time.

Strategic Framework

Communication Channels

To ensure that communication reaches employees effectively, the campaign adopts a multi-channel communication approach. Each communication channel has a specific purpose and is selected based on the type of information being delivered, the level of employee interaction required, and the communication objectives of the campaign.

Using multiple channels also helps improve message consistency while accommodating different employee communication preferences in a hybrid working environment.

Email Newsletter

The monthly email newsletter serves as the primary channel for sharing company updates, employee achievements, upcoming events, and important organizational announcements. The newsletter is designed with concise content and a visually engaging layout to encourage higher open and read rates.

Purpose

- Share company updates
- Highlight employee achievements
- Promote upcoming initiatives

Microsoft Teams

Microsoft Teams functions as the organization's primary platform for day-to-day communication. It enables employees to receive real-time announcements, participate in discussions, and collaborate with colleagues regardless of their work location.

Purpose

- Daily communication
- Team collaboration
- Instant announcements

Company Intranet

The company intranet acts as a centralized information hub where employees can access communication materials, policies, campaign resources, and organizational updates at any time.

Purpose

- Central information repository
- Communication archive
- Campaign resources

Town Hall Meeting

Monthly Town Hall meetings provide an opportunity for leadership to communicate directly with employees, share organizational updates, celebrate achievements, and answer employee questions in an open forum.

Purpose

- Leadership communication
- Two-way interaction
- Employee engagement

Employee Survey

Employee surveys are conducted before, during, and after the campaign to understand employee perceptions, collect feedback, and measure campaign effectiveness. Survey results also support continuous improvement of future communication activities.

Purpose

- Collect employee feedback
- Measure campaign performance
- Identify improvement opportunities

Communication Channel Integration

Rather than operating independently, each communication channel complements one another to create a consistent communication experience. While email newsletters provide structured updates, Microsoft Teams supports daily interaction, the intranet serves as a central information hub, Town Hall meetings encourage direct engagement with leadership, and employee surveys provide valuable feedback for continuous improvement.

This integrated approach ensures that communication remains accessible, relevant, and aligned with the needs of employees across different work environments.

Campaign Timeline

The campaign will be implemented over a twelve-week period, beginning with research and planning, followed by content development, campaign implementation, and continuous evaluation. Each phase is designed to ensure that communication activities are executed in a structured and measurable manner.

Campaign Schedule

Phase	Timeline	Key Activities
Research & Planning	Week 1-2	Communication audit, employee survey, strategy planning
Content Development	Week 3-4	Create newsletters, email campaign, Town Hall materials
Campaign Launch	Week 5-8	Launch campaign across all communication channels
Monitoring & Engagement	Week 9-10	Monitoring engagement, collect employee feedback
Evaluation	Week 11-12	Measure campaign performance

The campaign timeline provides a clear implementation roadmap, allowing each activity to be completed in a logical sequence. This phased approach supports effective communication, encourages employee participation, and ensures that campaign performance can be evaluated throughout the implementation period.

Measurement & KPI

The success of this campaign will be measured using several key performance indicators (KPIs). These indicators help evaluate whether the communication objectives have been achieved and identify areas that may require further improvement.

KPI	Target
Employee Engagement	Increase by 25%
Newsletter Open Rate	Minimum 70%
Town Hall Participation	Increase by 40%
Employee Feedback	Positive feedback from at least 80% of employees
Communication Consistency	Consistent messaging across all communication channels

Campaign Evaluation

At the end of the campaign, the results will be reviewed based on employee feedback, participation data, and communication performance. The findings will be used to evaluate the effectiveness of the campaign and provide recommendations for future internal communication initiatives.

Conclusion

Effective internal communication plays an important role in building employee engagement and maintaining a strong organizational culture, especially in a hybrid working environment. This campaign was developed to address communication challenges within Lumina Group through a structured and practical communication strategy.

By combining consistent messaging, multiple communication channels, employee participation, and continuous evaluation, the campaign aims to improve the flow of information and strengthen connections between employees and the organization. Each activity has been designed to support the campaign objectives while creating a more engaging communication experience.

Although this proposal is presented as a case study, the overall strategy reflects communication practices that can be applied in a real organizational setting. It demonstrates how strategic communication can support organizational goals while encouraging a more connected and collaborative workplace.

This document was developed as part of a professional portfolio to demonstrate strategic communication planning and campaign development skills.
